Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

Senator Glass returning to his duties in Washington this week after a long absence, took the lead in fighting New Deal relief policies which he declared, have the "nation tottering on the verge of bankruptcy. A 10 percent decline in Federal securities, said Glass, "would bankrupt 90 per cent of the banks in the country, and they have to buy all the Federal bond offerings in self defense." Amendments to force local communities to share more of the relief load were lost, however.

A boy of six was found shot twice in a coal hole near Mount Carmel, Pa., this week. The lad had left the house only a half hour before found. An attending physician stated the boy might have been shot once accidently, but the two wounds indicated he had been killed deliberately.

Representative Cox, Democrat of Georgia, has charged the government's attitude in refusing to deliver mail to strike picketed steel plants to be the "most scandalous exhibition of cowardice" ever witnessed. Cox joined Republicans in denouncing the Administration for its encouragement of the lawless C I O.

Steel workers in the Republic plant at Niles, Ohio, have wired their protest to Sec. of Labor Perkins against her attitude in the steel strike. They stated they wanted the right to go back and forth from their homes to their work in the plant....."instead of helping us get the rights and protection to which we are entitled as citizens and workers you send a telegram to Gov. Davey (of Ohio) saying you hope he will be able to maintain the status quo.....".

Senior Class Is Largest in AHS History

Much has been said and written about the Class of 1937 being the largest in the history of Addison High School and this is borne out by figures submitted by Principal [illegible] during the week.

Since the depression years a larger number of students have been remaining in school. Prior to that time many boys and girls left school to go into business, to work or to marry early. However, since that time, there has been less need for workers and young couples have hesitated about getting married. Hence more students have been remaining in school.

The graduating classes for the past ten years have been larger than any in the 62 years of commencement activities in the Addison High School.

In 1927 there were 24 graduates which increased to 26 in 1928 and dropped to 25 in 1929 and again in 1930 to 24 the lowest in the ten-year period.

The clas of 1931 numbered 31 students, 1933 saw an increase to 32 students and this same figure held for 1934 when there were 32 graduates. In 1935 there were 35 graduates and this dropped last year to 28, making this year's class nearly double that of 1936.

The Rev. Longley Speaks to AHS Graduating Class

The Rev. Harry Longley, rector of Christ Church, Corning, delivered the baccalaureate address to the graduating class of Addison High School Sunday evening in the absence of the Rev. Thomas A. Withey. The Chapel of the Redeemer was filled for the occasion, many desiring to attend being unable to obtain seats.

The Rev. Longley said in part:

"When Walter Lippmann gave the commencement address at Drake University last week, he began by saying that not only could he not remember the man who spoke at his own college commencement but also that he could not remember a single word that he said.

"I want to put before you tonight two questions. The first is: 'Is there today a vital interest in Religion?' Are people still incurably Religious?

"Is there today a vital interest in Religion? It is being said that there is little or no interest in Religion,—not that that's anything new. In 1789, at the time of the French Revolution, the revolutionists tore the crucifix from the altar of Notre Dame Cathedral in Paris and put up in its stead a statue of the Goddess of Reason; and they declared Religion dead, but it came back in France with tremendous force. Twenty years ago, in Russia, Religion was ruled out by law, killed, and to insure its death millions were enrolled in a society of the Godless. But today, The Society of the Godless is rapidly losing members while the churches are rapidly gaining them; and, a few months ago, the Soviet Government restored citizen-

Flood Averted as Addison Dikes Hold

The Addison dikes met the test of a threatening flood Monday and successfully withstood the high water of Tuscarora Creek. While saving the inhabitants of the village from inundation, the dikes were shown by this week's high water to be not yet perfect, and certain weaknesses must be corrected if the large amount of money expended here shall continue to offer real protection.

The first high water to hit Addison came from an unexpected source, hitting residents of the high land to the south of the village, instead of the low area in the center of the corporation.

The fire alarm sounded a little after four o'clock in the afternoon Monday, but it was a water warning instead of a summons to throw water on fire. Reuben Brook, the stream which drains the Orr Hill section south of Addison, had gone on a rampage following three hours of terrific downpour, and was gutting the street and yards along the farther end of South Street.

RECREATIONAL PROGRAM

The Adult Educational and Recreational Program will start its summer session Monday, June 28, at the local school playground.

Monday and Tuesday of each week from 8:30 to 12:30 will be devoted to children. This time will be taken up with supervised educational games and modeling and weaving crafts.

The rest of the week from 4:30 PM to dark will be given to adults. Softball and archery will be specialized at this time. Other forms of recreation are to be added later.

Charles Vose, who had charge of the AEP Educational Program at the high school will also act as playground instructor this summer. Mr. Vose urges those interested to register with him as soon as possible. Volunteer assistants will be accepted for several of the playground activities. Recreational groups are free and open to adults and children on specified days.

Dick Gladstone Is County's Best Grade Speller

Dick Gladstone, son of Principal and Mrs. Irving Gladstone, is champion speller of Steuben County's grade schools by virtue of a victory secured at the county spelling contest held in Haverling High School, Bath, Saturday afternoon.

The contestants were given 50 words and at the close of the first group, Dick was tied with a young lady from Northside, Corning. However, the judges decided a second group of words should be given and 25 words were chosen. In this the Addisonite left his opponent behind scoring 96 of a possible 100 points while she scored 84 per cent. Dick missed one word to lack a 100 per cent rating, going down on the word toboggan.

The champion will represent Steuben County at the state spelling contest to be held in conjunction with the New York State Fair in Syracuse in September. He will compete with the champions of the other counties in the state.

Frank C. Dickerson

Frank C. Dickerson, 77, died Thursday night, June 17, 1937, at his home on Upper Farnham street after an illness of several weeks. Death was caused by complications of diseases.

Mr. Dickerson was born June 5, 1860 in the Town of Tuscarora, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Mark Dickerson. He lived in Addison for 50 years and has engaged in carpentry work here throughout that time. His wife, the late Elizabeth Gardner, died several years ago and Mr. Dickerson has made his home alone since that time.

One son, Jay, Rochester, survives. Funeral services were held Sunday afternoon with the Rev. Kenneth E. Arnold of the Addison Baptist Church officiating. Interment was made in Addison Rural Cemetery.

Jeffrey Smith and Asa Smith were in Canisteo on business Wednesday.

Couple Injured In Accident

Two colored people of New York City met with an accident near the Rocks on the Woodhull-Addison highway Saturday evening while enroute to Chicago to witness the Louis-Braddock bout. After making the sharp curve the car climbed the bank and turned over as it again reached the road. The lady was removed to the Corning Hospital. Her injuries proved to be slight and the driver was uninjured except for bruises. The Ford car was badly wrecked. The couple left by train the following day for Chicago.

Strange Pigeon is Seen Around Addison

Minor Fraser, for long years curator of the Fraser Museum and collector of relics extraordinary, is authority for the news that a dove of peace is hanging around Addison. Mr. Fraser states this dove, an unusually large bird of its species, has been around the village for a number of days. He has been feeding it and notes the bird has a ring around each leg. Every morning the dove sails towards the hills to the north of the village, returning again the following day.

Mr. Frazer states his belief that the dove is a carrier pigeon which has lost its bearings and is stopping off here until it recovers its seventh sense of direction. He has not ventured an opinion as to whether or not, his so-called dove of peace is predicting the end of the Spanish war.

Pagan vs. Modern Sacrifices Defined

Pagan worship demanded human sacrifice. On feast days the priests consecrated a virgin maiden and with one swift stroke of a sharp knife, spilled her blood to appease the Gods. Horrible? Yes, we are civilized now, and offer up our sacrifices daily instead of yearly. Our Gods are "Speed" and "Patriotism". Every day of the year Americans sacrifice 300 victims to the God of Speed. Not a swift merciful death, but the horrible agony of broken bodies, flesh ground to bits, torturous agony. On holidays we offer up additional hundreds of victims to the God "Patriotism". Boys and girls killed by exploding fireworks, drowning, speed-mad motorists. Civilization???

Two New Rigs Ready to Go in The Woodhull Gas Field Friday

The newly discovered Woodhull gas field is beginning to bristle with rigs as several concerns hurry to drill wells to tap the hidden resources so far under ground. By yesterdays count one well was drilling, two more rigs were erected and work was starting on another rig which will drill a fourth well, all within hailing distance, save for the heavy woods.

The Lycoming well on the Calkins farm was down to about 725 feet yesterday with the drillers reporting hard drilling in slatey shale Harry Huber, driller on the third shift of the Calkins stated that in 25 years experience he had never encountered such hard drilling at that depth. The Calkins was spudded in with a 16 inch hole and was still drilling Wednesday with a 13 inch bit. Drillers stated they believed they were now pretty well below the surface water and would now case the well sometime today. The hole will then be drilled on down at 10 inches. This is a large diameter hole for a gas well in the east.

Richard Atwater had his rig erected on the Moyer farm yesterday and expected to rig-up today. He hopes to spud in this well the last of the week. Fahrman Brothers were rigging up on the Ackerman well a short distance south of the Herrington Discovery well, and half way between it and the Lycoming well. John Becker of Bradford is the owner.

Three other rigs are expected in the field in a few days, and the purr of engines and pound of drills is beginning to be a common sound south of Woodhull.

A GRADUATE'S DEBT

Another year has rolled around and another graduating class of young people of Addison and vicinity have received their diplomas, showing they are added to the long list of alumni of Addison High School. This year the largest class in the history of the local institution are stepping out of the schoolroom into another stage of their lives.

For some few the step will be simply a transition from the high school to a higher place of education in college or normal school. More will feel that their formal education is finished and, doubtless will be seeking some kind of a job or looking forward to taking their places in the work of the world. To those who can go on to college there is little we can say, for they have probably taken care in selecting another school, and the benefit to come from higher education will be gauged by the new instructors and the students' application to the task imposed. College life is far different from high school life, in that the student is more completely on his own and must not expect his teachers will follow him up personally to see lessons assigned are mastered. If he dawdles and wastes his time, he will not be chided as he would be in high school, but there will be few faculty mourners when he fails.

Those graduates who cannot go on to college should not jump to the conclusion that, having finished high school their education must be considered complete. Aside from the invaluable friendships gained there, many college graduates consider the greatest benefit of a higher education is not the actual facts learned while in college, but rather the training which enables them to go on to the discovery of greater knowledge when they finish school. If that is true, then the truly ambitious person is not so greatly handicapped by the lack of a college education. But first he must reach the attitude of mind that his education is NOT finished. He must then determine to do everything possible to improve his mind.

Whatever line of work he undertakes he should interest himself in that work as much as though it were a game to be played for the fun of winning. And he should determine to achieve all the knowledge he can about the thing he is doing, whatever it is. Nor should he narrow his outlook entirely to study of the one thing he is trying to do well. He should learn to take an interest in many different things, and by reading and experimentation help himself to master the things in which he becomes interested. Hobbies are probably the greatest educators on earth, if we pick out hobbies which offer possibilities for mental development.

Every person who graduates has drawn near, if not actually attained the threshold of manhood or womanhood. Hence they have reached the point where they must no longer be called children, nor excused for the shortcomings of childhood. Coming to the age of responsibility they must be ready to accept some of the duties of citizenship, along with their freedom from school teachers' mandates. If the twelve-odd years they have spent getting up to, and through high school has taught them anything at all, it should have brought the knowledge that all the real success of this country has been built upon its three cornerstones; the home, the school and the church. Into the hands of millions of high school graduates coming out of thousands of towns and cities, there will soon be thrust the responsibility for maintaining American institutions. If they hold fast to old traditions and uphold the three institutions which have meant everything in a country that has proven the greatest land of opportunity, America will go onward. If any one of the three is allowed to seriously decay we shall soon find ourselves in the same position with people in terror-ridden countries of Europe.

Each one of you graduates has received a diploma because another generation has performed its obligation to you. Are you going to accept your share of this debt and shoulder your responsibility for Americans in the next generation? Then uphold the institutions which have done everything to bring you that diploma.

A SHARP REBUKE

A short time ago the Senate Judiciary Committee brought in its report against the Roosevelt court packing bill, which reads in part, . . .

"We recommend the rejection of this bill as a needless, futile and utterly dangerous abandonment of constitutional principle . . . It would not banish age from the bench nor abolish divided decisions. It would not affect the power of any court to hold laws unconstitutional . . . It would not reduce the expense of litigation nor speed the decision of cases. It is a proposal without precedent and without justification . . . It is a measure which should be so emphatically rejected that its parallel will never again be presented to the free representatives of the free people of America".

Of course the measure has yet to be debated on the floor of the Senate and the honorable gentlemen have yet to vote upon it, but few people, having read this scathing denunciation of the President's attempt to take executive dominance of the judiciary will now believe that he will be able to coerce a majority of men in that august body into giving him this unthinkable power. This in spite of all the cunning scheming of that conscienceless political henchman, Jim Farley.

Seven Democrats and three Republicans joined in bringing this denunciatory report before their colleagues. Men who have traveled along with the New Deal just as far as they dared, have finally seen the true meaning behind all this Roosevelt grasp for power and are at last remembering their oath of office to support the Constitution. Like the Frenchmen at Verdun they have faced the force which has rushed them against their will for four years, now to say "you shall not pass here".

It is the worst defeat Roosevelt has suffered during his political career. It is probably the most bitterly worded denouncement of legislation ever offered by a chief executive of this country. It is a solemn warning to presidents yet unelected, never to introduce such an issue before Congress. It is a notice served upon Franklin Roosevelt that the elected representatives of the people are not to be a mere rubber stamp to do his bidding, whatever the gravity of the situation.

It promises to be a long, hot summer in Washington. But for once it may be the New Dealers instead of Congressmen who will get the hottest under the collar before the summer is over.

PUBLIC SENTIMENT REVOLTS

John Lewis' big union, which a few months ago was riding high, wide and handsome across industrial America, has recently been slowed down by its own intolerance and the public disgust with its tactics. The big steel strike called several weeks ago against independent steel companies has been a turning point in the sentiment which has developed against the Lewis group, the biggest show of public opinion having been staged at Monroe, Michigan.

Mayor Knaggs of Monroe was disturbed by the fact that the S. W. O. C. called a strike against the wishes of an apparent majority of the employes of Newton Steel Company of that town. The city election commissioners polled the mill workers on the question of returning to work and found the returns were 356 for and 20 against working. Although the union had advised its members not to vote it was clear that a majority of the Newton men were out of work against their will. To give them a chance to honestly earn their living Mayor Knaggs announced the steel plant would be re-opened, by force if necessary.

With a delegation of police backed up by workers who desired to return to their jobs the picket lines were forcefully removed from the road to the mill and the wheels started turning again.

This is one instance where strikers have been unable to keep their fellow workers out of their jobs. As a matter of fact several of the steel plants have kept operating in spite of the strike, notably the Republic plant in Chicago where loyal workers are being housed on the company grounds. And the steel men are determined not to sign a contract with any group so irresponsible as the C. I. O. has proved to be. There have been frequent examples of bad faith shown by the Lewis union, numerous strikes having been called against General Motors plants at various places in violation of the contract made with that company. Out in Michigan about ten days ago a union committee bargained with the Consumers Power Company, agreeing to a five cents an hour pay increase and other benefits. When the terms were reported to the workers next day they were indignant to think their representatives had not gotten a bigger pay increase and immediately pulled the switches leaving Flint, Saginaw and Bay City with their 300,000 inhabitants plunged in darkness. That stirred public sentiment to such a pitch that even pussy-footing Governor Murphy spoke sternly to the strikers and their committee hurrying back from Washington brought the men to their senses.

The crux of the labor trouble has come from the fact that the Administration placed itself under obligation to John L. Lewis at the national election, and the latter has been running the country ever since. Mr. Roosevelt's New Deal advisers with all their cracked-brained schemes for creating power for the executive have not stopped to consider that in courting the labor unions they were letting loose Nero's lions without providing any way for chaining them up again. Every bit of legislation coming from the New Deal has been aimed to bring labor votes irrespective of what happened to the employers of labor, or the country at large.

So we have had the worst epidemic of strikes that ever hit the country, and not one of them has really been settled for permanent peace. And the C. I. O. is marching out into the rural areas to organize the workers and collect money from the workers' pay envelopes. They have called a strike in Perry and are threatening to strike at Elkland. They tried to get into the Corning Glass works, but found loyal employes ready to bounce them out at double quick.

Everywhere the public is getting thoroughly fed up on Lewis and his tactics, and the pug-faced miner is riding for a fall.

Mr. Roosevelt's Fiasco

By WALTER LIPPMANN

THE report of the Senate committee does more than to state with devastating logic the case for the passion to prevent the judiciary bill should not pass. It goes further and calls upon the Senate to establish a precedent sufficiently impressive to discourage any one else in the future from attempting to make the judiciary subservient to the Congress or the Executive. "It is a measure," says the report, "which should be so emphatically rejected that its parallel will never again be presented to the free representatives of the free people of America."

Thus the majority of the committee ask the Senate to do more than to put the bill aside. They ask for a rejection, so emphatic, so plain to every one, that this attempt to subvert the independence of the courts will have been turned into a decisive affirmation of their independence. They ask for a rejection which will remove the idea, entertained by some, that under the Constitution the Congress has a kind of implied right to pack the Court. They are asking the Senate to make this issue the occasion for a clarifying interpretation of its own powers in respect to the courts.

This is high ground. But no Senator who takes it will ever be sorry that he took it. None will ever regret that he has been numbered among those who defended triumphantly the essential principle of the American government—that all men, all officials, all agencies of government are under the law, and that, subject to the inalienable right of the sovereign people to amend the law, the law at any moment is what independent judges say it is.

Standing on this ground, they will be standing where the liberators of mankind have stood for three hundred years. They will be in good company, and they need have no qualms. For while there are sincere and earnest men who believe in this bill, they have been met in open debate, and so completely has the case for the bill been shattered that its nominal sponsors have been reduced to silence. The President's supporters who voted for the bill have not even ventured to turn in a report rebutting the report of the majority.

No doubt the outcome is a shock to the Administration. To have staked so much on such a daring gamble, and to have lost, is a serious blow to its prestige. The real question for the President is whether he wishes to repair his position or to make a bad situation worse.

If he drives ahead he will make it worse. For the men who have taken their stand against him on this issue have burned their bridges, and they know it. They realize quite well that if the President does not accept his defeat on this measure, there is between him and them a political war to the death.

They comprise the ablest progressives and the ablest conservatives among the Democrats in the Senate, whereas the few really able Senators supporting the President are manifestly sick at heart. So obviously is this the case that at the climax of the struggle, when every vote is needed and every ounce of influence, the Vice-President of the United States has left the field of battle and has gone to Texas to catch fish. If not even Mr. Garner will stay in Washington to fight for this bill, what must be the state of mind of the President's nominal supporters?

If the President is wise he will take his losses and quit. He will ask Congress to pass only the most necessary measures at this session, and he will then allow it to adjourn to catch its breath, to take a rest, to enable every one to recover his poise and his good temper.

The government of the United States, with such incredible power concentrated in the President, has become too complicated for an ordinary human brain. Mr. Roosevelt and his advisers have no more than ordinary human brains, and it has become impossible for them to understand all the questions they have undertaken to deal with. They are at the point where they haven't the time or the energy to deal with their problems

They need a rest and they need a pause. If they do not take a rest, if they just plunge ahead asking for new powers to deal with more and more problems, they will, because human nature cannot stand the pace, make one ghastly error after another.

The fiasco of the judiciary bill is due at bottom, not to some consciously sinister design, but to the sheer fact that Mr. Roosevelt thought it was a good idea, and never had the time or the energy to take the trouble to study it or to ask the advice of competent men. Nobody can make decisions as momentous as this in odd moments amidst a thousand distractions. And if there is anybody left who is a good enough friend of the President to tell him the truth, he will tell him now that the real lesson of the judiciary bill is that no mortal man can chew what the President has bitten off.

If Franklin Roosevelt's good angel would grant him a little humility, it would help him more than anything else.

Monroe Strike Shows Effect of Violence

By MARK SULLIVAN

A newspaper in Monroe, Mich., "The Evening News," speaking of the latest phase of the strike in that city says:

"A great victory, perhaps one of national significance and importance, has been won in Monroe. The community has faced, and today apparently has settled, issues entirely divorced from any legitimate labor cause or argument. The citizens of Monroe," "The News" said, "in the conspicuous absence of state help . . . have enforced our own local law, our own state and Federal law, our fundamental principle of American order."

The Monroe victory, as a victory, is local; but as an incident, as a type case, the Monroe incident deserves the phrase which the local paper uses, "of national significance."

The significance lies in the opportunity it affords for analysis of the part violence has in the revolution through which America is being taken. Hardly anything is more important for the nation to understand and consider. Violence was sure to come. It is here. It is almost certain to increase. The development of it, so far, the point it has now reached, is illustrated by the Monroe incident.

In Monroe, Mich., is a steel plant. To Monroe, from outside, came organizers of C. I. O. The organizers, as a part of their strategy, brought about a strike. To cause a strike as a means of creating union spirit is a familiar part of the strategy of organizers starting a union in a plant which does not have one. That, however, is another story, not germane here.

The number of workers enlisted by the organizers to strike at Monroe was a very small proportion of the whole, apparently about 100 out of a total of 1,350 workers. C. I. O. leaders set up a body of picketers on a road from the town to the plant, so as to prevent access to the plant by workers who wished to work. The particular kind of picketing practiced was a violation of Michigan state law. Accounts say that most of the picketers and all their leaders were not citizens of Monroe, nor workers in the plant. They came from out of town.

What followed immediately, as respects action by city or state authorities, is not fully clear. What I write is based mainly on accounts sent out to New York and other city newspapers. In the accounts are some gaps. Some one historian or other impartial investigator, ought to make and publish careful hour-to-hour record of the Monroe incident, for it will be of history.

After some [illegible] Monroe called on all able-bodied citizens, especially those having military experience (meaning American Legion men) to volunteer for special police duty. To this C. I. O. organizers leading the picketers replied that 8,000 members of C. I. O. would be brought into Monroe from Detroit and Toledo.

The Mayor's volunteer police force marched out and confronted the picketers. The picketers were told by their leaders to stand firm. They were assured tha thousands of C. I. O. members were on their way from Toledo to attack the police force from the rear.

For two hours there was parleying between the C. I. O. leaders and the head of the volunteer police. Finally, the chief of police gave the picketers two minutes to clear the road and permit passage of workers who wished to go to work. At the end of that time the volunteer police force attacked with weapons that included tear gas. The picketers dispersed. The workers proceeded to the plant.

The following day C. I. O. leaders first started and then stopped an invasion by members from outside Monroe. They first called, and then canceled, a "gigantic tri-state mass meeting" of C. I. O. workers from outside Monroe. In the end the striking workers were permitted to continue picketing—but with the picketing strictly reduced to the form that is legal under Michigan law. All this constitutes the Monroe victory.

As an illustration of the whole national situation the Monroe incident lacks one feature. It is not clearly apparent that, or to what extent, the law-enforcing agencies, particularly the Governor of Michigan, were appealed to, or what they did. "The Monroe News" merely speaks of "the conspicuous absence of state help."

But this feature of the national situation as a whole is illustrated by what happened at Flint, Mich., in January. There, after sit-downers had occupied a plant, the Governor sent in troops. But for what purpose and effect did he send them? He did not send them to evict the sit-downers. On the contrary, after the owner of the plant had obtained a court order of eviction, and after the sheriff had asked the Governor for help to carry out the order, the Governor did not reply and the court order never was enforced.

The actual effect of the presence of state troops at Flint was to protect the sit-downers. For at Flint, as at Monroe, there was the beginning of a voluntary movement by workers not on strike and by citizens interference by any voluntary organization of citizens, to protect them in the advantage they had obtained by their sit-down.

In each case the first violence is used by C. I. O. By this violence zens of the community, acting as a vigilance organization, to get access to the plant for workers who wished to work. Actually the effect of the presence of the state troops at Flint was to protect the sit-downers from C. I. O. wins—unless and until greater violence is used by some other organization—either a law-enforcing body or a vigilante organization.

ship and the franchise to Priests, thus partially restoring official recognition to a plainly recrudescent body. Today, in Germany, the Church of Jesus Christ is being unmercifully persecuted, but it is also the institution which Hitler fears most. It is the only institution which has dared to defy him openly. These incidents are typical of happenings all down through history. In particular places at certain times, Religion has appeared to die. But it has always risen from the dead, stronger and more vital than ever.

"There is indeed much paganism in our modern world. There are great forces today, like Communism and Totalitarianism, more dangerous to the Church's liberty and peace than any forces in centuries. It would be foolish for those interested in Religion to stick their heads in the ground like an ostrich and ignore these facts; but it is also true, at the same time, that there is a vital interest in Religion. Man's relationship to God is by no means a dead issue. Man is still, as he has ever been, incurably religious.

"And, thereupon, we come to our second question which is really the more important of the two.—'Why is there today a vital interest in Religion?' Why is man incurably religious? Why will it be a hard thing for you ever to abandon Religion?

"Let me suggest two answers. We dare not believe only in the sufficiency of man.

"Just think of what we all too easily take for granted in the world of nature,—about which the greatest human minds know nothing. We ask, 'What time is it?' a dozen times a day. Yet time is an amazing mystery. It is startling to realize that were there people on the Pleiades who could look through a telescope at our earth, they would be seeing the earth as it was in Shakespeare's day. It takes light that long to travel from here to there. Our present day will be their present day four hundred years from now.

"Charles Darwin once stood in a tropic forest and said this: 'No man can stand here without feeling that these forests are temples filled with various productions of God; and that there is more in man than the breath of his body'. Millikan, perhaps the greatest of the modern scientists, ends a recent book with these words, 'Modern science, of the real sort, is slowly learning to walk humbly with its God. As long as man hopes and aspires and reflects upon the meaning of existence, there will be with him the necessity of acknowledging humbly his relationship with God".

"And the second answer is this: There is a vital interest in Religion today because it is all too plain to those who think that our Lord Jesus Christ, in the welter and confusion of politics and social life, in the midst of many personal problems, offers to this age the only sure solution of its difficulties and the only adequate inspiration to progress and advance.

"How true that has always been. Jesus Christ has inspired the highest art. I see Leonardo Da Vinci overcome by the sense of his own unworthiness reaching out to the Christ for inspiration. I see him making his painting of 'The Last Supper', the greatest in the field of art, making it his worship and prolonging its completion because it was his only hold on God whose beauty rather than the strange beauty of his Mona Lisa in the stress of his perverse passions he, nevertheless, desired with a compelling penitence. Jesus was Leonardo's light, his inspiration, his guiding star in the best years of his life. He was Raphael's when he created his 'Sistine Madonna' and Rembrandt's in his 'Prodigal Son.'

"In music, it is the same, or in the field of science, take for instance, medicine. Do we realize, and its a fact worth your proving, my friends, that the first hospitals in every new country to which Christian civilization has gone have been built by these Christians and their churches? And that, without Christ, there have been no hospitals, no care for the sufferings of men? The Church brought medical care to America, built our first hospitals and our laboratories. It is actually happening today in parts of the West. This has Our Lord done.

"But take yet other fields. Education? Everyone knows that not only the ideal of education but that ancient and modern colleges and universities have grown out of what the Church has built and inspired. Modern education? The Church inspired it.

"And not only is Jesus the hope of society, He is the hope of every individual man. Over and over again, men and women who come face to face with some seemingly insoluble problem of this life find in our Lord the problem's solution, its explanation,—the way out. He is our possibility of beauty and nobility. He reveals the Eternal Way when this world seems to defeat us. In Him, we are more than conquerors. Disease is overcome. Stevenson was tubercular, Milton was blind, Beethoven was deaf, but they all lived in Christ and they overcame the world. Poverty is overcome. Faraday, one of the greatest scientific experimenters of all time, was born over a stable, the son of an invalid blacksmith, his mother had to hire out as a scrubwoman to make ends meet,—but he trusted in the possibility of victory as life is lived in God.. In Jesus Christ, man finds that death is but the going through a door into an infinitely lovelier and happier room in the Mansions of God. And that's the other answer to why there is, indeed, a vital interest in Religion. When this world is stripped of all its vanities, and the things of man wherein he trusts fail as ultimately they always do, Jesus Christ does not fail. He remains The Way, The Truth, The Life,—Eternal Life. And deep in its heart, the world knows it. And it knows that it cannot get along without Him.

"Is there a vital interest in Religion? There is indeed. Read your newspapers, listen to your radios, look at your magazines!

"I have said that you will not long remember these words. You won't. But may I indulge the hope that you will remember this much: Man is incurably religious. For man to try not to be religious is as though he tried to be a fish or a bird instead of a man. You may think that you can escape the realization and consciousness of God. But you can't! Therefore I say to you, as tonight and in this season you commence a new period in your life's completion, remember this always: You are spiritual, related to God. You have a soul. Remember that,— cultivate your soul, follow Christ, be religious, honestly and sincerely,—and all the rest of your life will turn out all right.

Honor acquired is security for that which should be acquired.

The Rambler

The desire for metal in these days of high priced steel has led to the stealing of three 40-pound cannon balls from the Canajoharie Falls Cemetery near Canajoharie. It seems some thieves just want to be mean, for the cannon balls were taken from a soldiers' and sailors' plot in the cemetery.

By the looks of things there will be no more CCC news in the Addison Advertiser and local papers for the unit at Camp 231 is scheduled to leave around June 30. Unofficial reports have been circulated about. And just when the fellows were getting used to our ways and we were getting use to their youthful exuberance.

—o—

I'm not a minister, but may I suggest that you continue going to church during the summer months. Even when the weather is nice, take an hour off and attend service some place and I'm sure you will appreciate your good time and the weather all the more for having gone to church. And it won't hurt you anyway.

—o—

We are printing a special page of congratulatory messages from the merchants of Addison to the graduates of the Class of 1937 of the Addison High School this week.

—o—

Pulling into a curb and striking another car is quite a common custom in most cities these days. But it is only courtesy to stop and see if any damage has been done to the car you struck. I saw license 1 J 84-66 hit a car here and then the driver backed away quickly and went on his way to another parking place. A friend remarked "There is a potential hit-and-run driver".

One son or daughter was not kidding his or her mother on the regents marks received during the past examination in the Addison High School for I saw her over there with a note book in hand copying the marks from the bulletin board.

—o—

One of my constant contributors tells me that one day last week watermelons were offered for sale in the Market Basket for 35c for the half and 75c for whole melon.

—o—

"The flag was flying at High School Flag Day during the time when it was supposed to fly. Owing to rain at times during the day the flag was not flown," says Principal Gladstone. I carried a story here last week from a contributor re: the flag not flying at the school where Americanization is taught. I apologize for not investigating.

—o—

I borrowed this. "First place among the meanest men goes to the fellow whose paper was stopped for non-payment and then tells that he quit his subscription because the paper was no good".

—o—

Every once in a while someone comments on the fact they have not planted their garden yet and they feel it is late. But those who did plant early are bemoaning the fact that much of their work has been washed away in recent rains.

—o—

Commencement week is over. Elizabeth Dignen says the dream is ended. For some the melody will linger on in having others do things for them, while many will dig in and take their part in the community, state and nation. To them the Rambler wishes good luck.

—o—

I once had a dream like yours. In fact still do. Dreams of fame, riches, property, position and all that. But let me tell you kids something. One of the first things you want to do is be happy. And I don't mean from playing all the time, but find an inside happiness and the other things will come to you.

—o—

The rain drenched the juniors and seniors Monday but they did not mind at their picnic. Old Sol did shine for the graduates Commencement night and Wednesday morning when they went to have their pictures taken. The girls sure looked sweet in their white gowns and arm bouquets.

—o—

The Monday rains showed what the dike in the Tuscarora creek could do. Had they not been there many more people would still be shoveling dirt from porches and cellars. A few leaks developed in it and when the earth settles these may disappear.

—o—

Well, Folks, the Baby Derby ends Saturday night. Better get out and squeeze for your favorite in the next few days. The winners will be announced in this paper next week and the tabulations will be in our window Monday. May the best baby win.

—o—

I'm wondering how many of the graduates of this year and yes of other years, remembers what was said to them at the baccalaureate and at commencement time by the speakers. Not that the talks were the type to make one forget, but in the excitement I'm sure the grads will have to read the papers to know what it was all about.

—o—

Incidentally, we hope we did not miss any of the news during commencement week for this issue for we tried to make a paper worthy of being saved by the graduates, their parents and friends.

—o—

That's all.

—The Rambler.

C C C Activities

Boys Interested in Archery

When it was announced in camp that Mr. Vose, adult education teacher, of Addison, would teach a class in archery during the summer months and would allow CCC boys to enroll, the boys of the 231st Company showed a very keen interest in the announcement. Many of the boys plan to make their own bows, under the direction of Mr. Vose.

Archery is not a sissy sport, as some people imagine. It takes real strength to draw a bow, and it takes much practice before the modern Cupid can tear the heart out of the bull's eye.

There are some people, who, even nowadays, go hunting with the bow and arrow. They claim that there is no sport in killing an animal with a gun because the poor thing doesn't have half a chance of getting away once the gun is leveled in his direction, but if a bow and arrow is used, the animal has more of a chance to escape since you have to be a real marksman to kill an animal with a flying arrow. You may hit him but if you don't hit him in the right place your prize will get away.

So, if you see CCC boys stalking through the woods with bows and arrows, looking like a bunch of Redskins, don't be alarmed. They will just be on a field trip of the archery class.

Transferred to Arkport

K. J. Bassett, inspector for the U. S. Engineering Department, has been transferred to Arkport where he will continue his work as inspector for the department.

Photography Club Popular

The Photography Club, under the direction of Robert B. Holder, educational adviser, has increased in popularity with the advent of the summer months. Almost a score of fellows have been coming in to learn how to make their own prints and develop their own films. Many of the newcomers to the club thought that photography was some deep, dark, mysterious, chemical process, and they were visibly amazed when they watched the comparative simplicity of the operations. A number of the boys are planning to get their own photography outfits so that they may practice this fascinating hobby by themselves.

Final Typing Class

The final typing class of the Addison Adult Education Project, at which a number of CCC boys have been regular attendants, was held last Friday evening. Mr. Vose, the instructor, complimented the CCC group on their fine showing in the class. It is too bad that these typing classes have to be discontinued for the summer. Most of the CCC boys in the typing class plan to use their newly-acquired skill to aid them in securing the vocation of their choice. One of the boys attending has an ambition to be a certified public accountant. With his knowledge of typing he will be one step nearer his goal.

Movie Manager Donates Softball

We wish to publicly thank Mr. Smith, manager of the local Avon theatre for his interest in our welfare. Recently he donated a softball to the boys of the camp softball team.

Dance Notes

The dance held Friday night, June 11 sponsored by the Leaders' Club of Co. 231 of the Civilian Conservation Corps, at the reservation in South Addison was one of the most successful social events since the opening of camp in September, 1936. Residents of the surrounding communities responded to the friendly call of the cadets' generous offer. The Alleghany Mountaineers, a six-piece "hill billy" orchestra, supplied music for round and square dancing as well as microphonic effect at expense of the company.

Entertainment of the burlesque category was arranged by the masters of ceremonies Tony Iraggi and Steve Maloney. The cast was as follows: (1) Frank (Pop) Hanly—singing—"I Know What it Means to Be Lonesome". (2) Tony (Moe) Traggi— singing and gestures of "Laugh Clown, Laugh". (3) John (J.C.) Cabic—(Tip Tap Toeing) to soft shoe dancing. (4) Frank (Pop) Hanly and Chester Frazoc—playing Polish hops and marches on their own hand-made instruments. (5) Ralph (Happy) Piccarelli— singing popular crooning numbers, among them "Pennies From Heaven".

The audience appeared to be one of the most appreciative and orderly assembled bodies of people your correspondent ever had the pleasure of meeting. They seemed to enjoy the friendly surroundings and the courtesy rendered to the civilian populace.

Among the notables present were Mr. and Mrs. Abe Bolio and friends who were celebrating their 26th year of wedded life; Captain R. A. Manst, Cav. Res. commanding officer in charge; 1st Lt. A. W. Smith, Coast Art. Res. and his wife; Piper Heidrick and friends; Chet Piecuch and family, as well as many more whose names are not known to the writer.

The highlight of the evening was a warm and sincere birthday salute to John E. Cabic, senior leader and artist, connected with company 231 by members of the faculty and friends who shared in their opinion. Stephen Maloney read the message over the microphone equipment and the audience applauded.

Plans are being made for another dance to be held on the reservation June 25, which will be officially announced at a later date.

Locals Defeat Monterey Team

The Monterey team scored its first run at the last of the second inning. In the last of the eighth, Monterey scored once more, bringing the score to a tie. Then it began to look like anybodys game. Two more runs were scored by Company 231's team, in their last turn at bat.

CONDITION IMPROVED

The condition of Raymond Walker of Hedgesville vicinity who submitted to an appendix operation at Corning Hospital about ten days ago is reported improved.

No satisfactory rule can be given for feeding grain to cows on pasture. The best rule is to watch closely the milk production and the condition of the cow; when either begins to drop, it means the cow is underfed.

Sold—14,000 miles from home

It's a long way from any dairy farm in America to Chiengmai, Siam.

By railroad and steamer and pack train the distance is more than 14,000 miles. Yet products from American dairy farms are used in Siam. Each year millions of pounds are bought and used in remote places throughout the world.

In 1857 Gail Borden's "canned" milk first opened the way for world-wide selling of dairy products. Foreign outlets for American milk are the result of modern sales and research pioneering.

Every million pounds of milk produced that finds a market in foreign lands, further supports the flow of milk money back to the farms of America.

Fred Astaire and Ginger Rogers dance, sing and romance their way through a gay, colorful story in "Top Hat", their new RKO Radio musical comedy, which features lyrics and melodies by Irving Berlin.

Edward Everett Horton, Helen Broderick, Erik Rhodes and Eric Blore head the cast supporting the co-stars. Horton, Rhodes and Blore it will be recalled, appeared with Astaire and Miss Rogers in their previous hit "The Gay Divorcee." Mark Sandrich, who directed "The Gay Divorcee," also directed "Top Hat."

Highlighted by songs and dances which play their romantic part in telling the story, "Top Hat" traces a romance which gets off to a flying love-at-first sight start in London, and meets complications against the colorful background of the Lido.

In the "Piccolino," a distinctive Italian rhythm dance, the picture is said to present a surprising successor to the previous Astaire-Rogers terpsichorean triumphs, the "Carioca" and the "Continental." Astaire created the new dance as the climaxing number of the production. He and Miss Rogers do an intricate version of the dance. An ensemble arrangement of sixty of Hollywood's finest dancers.

"I have just received communication from the Temporary Emergency Relief Administration that the July CCC enrollment date has been set as July 1st to 20th. Boys and men between 17 and 23, single, who have dependents now receiving relief, either Board of Child Welfare, home relief from the Welfare Officer, or whose parents are now employed on Works Progress Administration, are eligible.

"Immediate application must be made in person at the County Commissioner's Office at Bath, New York. Each applicant should bring a note from his Welfare Officer definitely stating that the family are recipients of relief as defined above. Immediate application must be made as a list of the proposed applicants will have to be submitted to the Rochester Office.

"As the rules now stand, any former enrollee, otherwise eligible may be re-selected, if he received an honorable discharge from his last term of enrollment and if he has been out of the Corps for at least a year."

Both fruits and vegetables are used to make pickles and relishes, and Cornell bulletin E-294 tells how to make many kinds. This bulletin is available free from the Office of Publication, Roberts Hall, Ithaca, New York.

Guy Cheney Seeks Reelection

Assemblyman Guy Cheney, Corning, will be a candidate to succeed himself in the assembly. He made this announcement during the past week and is seeking support of the voters of Steuben County, first district, based on his record during the year. His first term in office will expire December 31 and he will seek re-election in the fall elections. To date he is unopposed.

His record in Albany has been far superior to that of many of the first year men in the state's junior legislative chamber, according to records of his work and bills passed. He has been representing the first assembly district.

In his statement to the voters he said: "My work at Albany as the representative of the First Assembly District of Steuben has been a privilege which I have enjoyed. Because of my experience with public schools I was accorded more than the usual recognition given new members. It is my belief that I can be of even more service to the district another year.

"It is my desire to again represent my Assembly District, and, therefore, I shall be a candidate for Member this year. I respectfully ask the support of my fellow Republican in the coming Primary".

Mr. Cheney, past president of the New York State School Boards Association, has been an active member of the Board of Education in Corning District Nine for several years. He has brought about the centralization of many schools in New York State districts.

Charles Starrett's Dream Home is Real "Frontier" Ranch

An ideal "frontier cattle ranch" in some of the truly wild canyon country not many miles from Hollywood, but thirty years away from its modernisms—such is the dream home of Charles Starrett, Columbia's hard riding star of outdoor dramas.

Such a ranch, almost untouched by the "machine age", was one of the picturesque locations discovered by Columbia's location department for Starrett's new starring vehicle, "The Cowboy Star", showing Friday and Saturday at the Avon Theatre.

As a consequence of Starrett's enthusiasm over the primitive features of this real ranch, and the fact that it can be purchased at what seems a ridiculously low price, it is not at all improbable that Columbia's stellar top-hand may soon own the property outright.

To Iris Meredith, his leading woman, and to Si Jenks, character actor, who worked with him on location for "The Cowboy Star", Starrett confessed that in real life, just as in the screen play, he longs to get "back to boots and saddles".

"I don't mean that I'm tired of pictures, or that I want to give up screen acting," drawled Starrett. "No sir! No ma'am! When I get a ranch there will be only one modern touch on it—it will have a flying field. I'll have that—and a high-powered flying broncho—so that I can hop to and from the studio with no loss of time. But, otherwise, my ranch will be real rough and ready."

Friday Last Day for CCC in Addison

Rumors relative to the Civilian Conservation Corp or CCC Camp have clarified into actual orders and the camp will close Friday of this week. A skeleton staff will be left in Addison to supervise demolition of the camp.

Transfer orders have been received by the cadets in the corps here of which there are 120. These men will be sent to three other camps in the Binghamton district of the Second Corps Area. These camps are located at Newfield, Oxford and Ithaca.

The first detachment of fellows will be leaving Addison by truck Friday, tomorrow, morning. Special trucks will be sent here from Binghamton headquarters for this purpose. Thirty to 40 fellows will be sent to each camp. Several of the enrollees, who like Addison and vicinity, have secured jobs here and will remain.

The officers, Captain Maust and Lieutenant Smith have not received orders as to where they are to be located, nor has recreaional Advisor Holder been given an assignment. It is expected these officers with some of the leaders will remain in Addison until the first week in July to complete details of closing the camp. The camp property will be taken to Binghamton to remain. Several truck loads of material have already been removed.

The men came in the coldest part of the year, lived in tents, had a serious fire in January and after all their work on test pits found the soil unsuitable for erecting the proposed southern New York flood control dam.

Mrs. Eliza Minier and Miss Lena Minier attended the Walrath reunion in Jasper Saturday.
